INTRA-DISTRICT OPTIONS

WHAT ARE INTRA-DISTRICT OPTIONS?

Depending on your school district, you may have access to options like Early College High Schools or other magnet schools or programs. Call your district office or visit the district's website to determine what options may be available to you.

Magnet schools or programs have a particular theme or academic focus, such as performing arts, STEM, or International Baccalaureate (IB). Typically, students must apply or audition to attend.

Six Early College High Schools operate throughout the state:

- Michelle Obama Early College High School
- Coahoma Early College High School
- River City Early College High School
- Golden Triangle Early College High School
- Natchez Early College Academy
- Greenville Public Early College High School

These schools partner with two and four-year colleges, often located on their campuses, to help students gain two years of college credit or an associate's degree while simultaneously pursuing a high school diploma. Over 1,000 students attend high school in this type of setting after undergoing an application process developed by each school.

To determine whether a student may attend another school in the district (to which he or she is not assigned), contact your school.
